

LEONARDO CELLENO

Dermatologist of the Catholic University of Rome and lecturer in the School of specialization in dermatology of the same university. He's currently Head of Dermatology of Columbus Integrated Complex of this university.

Between his main interests there are: clinical dermatology, photo-dermatology and skin physiology and cosmetic dermatology .

From 1982 he was commissioned as director of the degree course in "Cosmetological Science and Technology "and founded the "Centre for Cosmetological Research" of the the Catholic University . which devotes part of its activity to in vitro study of anti oxidants and their interrelationships with ultraviolet light.

In 1990, he was appointed as effective member of the European Union's Scientific Committee on Cosmetic Products and other consumer products (currently SCCS) and remains in charge for three consecutive mandates.

In 2007, he founded the AIDECO (the Italian Association of Dermatology and Cosmetology) of which is still today president. This association brings together not only dermatologists but also plastic surgeons and other specialists of the medical sector who are interested in the many aspects of cosmetology.

In 2016, he was again elected as the effective member of the Scientific Committee of Consumer Safety of European Union (SCCS) with a five years mandate. He is the author of about 200 publications also of international interests and member of numerous scientific societies.