

24TH WORLD CONGRESS
OF DERMATOLOGY
MILAN 2019

LEIHONG XIANG

Professor & Vice Chair
Department of Dermatology, Huashan Hospital
Shanghai Medical College
Fudan University

Dr. Xiang Leihong M.D & Ph.D is currently Clinical Professor and Vice Chair, Department of Dermatology, Huashan Hospital, Shanghai Medical College, Fudan University. She has memberships in professional societies, such as Dermatology Society, China Medical Association; Medical Cosmetic and Aesthetics Society, China Medical Association; Vice Director, Acne research group, Dermatology Society, Chinese Integrated Traditional Medicine and Western Medicine Association; Director, Investigative Dermatology group, Shanghai Society of Dermatology, etc. She is also a member of American Association of Dermatology. Dr. Xiang underwent further fellow training in the Department of Dermatology, Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital and Mass General Hospital, Harvard Medical School. Her focus of interest and research is pigmentary skin disorders and cosmetic dermatology. She has lectured in Mayo Clinic, University of Pennsylvania, Boston University, University Hospitals of Cleveland, New York Presbyterian Hospital Cornell University, Hammersmith Hospital, London, UK on those topics.

Her research project "the experimental and clinical study of pure cultured melanocytes autologous and allograft in the treatment of vitiligo" achieved Shanghai Municipality Science and Technology Achievement Awards (No. 004710, 2000) and National Department of Health Science and Technology Achievement (No. 360-01-20710808-02, 2001). Dr. Xiang has published over 65 articles and 11 book chapters. She is the principal investigator of five research projects, supported by National Science Fund Committee (NSFC) and National Department of Education, etc.